By John Conenna

A very cold winter has hit it the Midwest and the east coast, January, with its major snowfalls and records breaking cold have put all of us at wits end. As I drove to work one cold January morning with snow and ice hitting my car, I said "I should be somewhere in Mexico. My choice would be the Riviera Maya in Cancun Mexico. This is definitely the spot after this winter. A value in itself with its tropical beaches, warm weather and great nightlife makes this a great choice. All-inclusive is the theme of the Riviera Maya. There are over 25 beautiful plush hotels that are right on the beach, and plenty of restaurants and nightlife to fill your appetite.

The Riviera Maya is a romantic setting for two, or a family vacation with those loved ones. The weather from February to late August is a guarantee of warm tropical days and endless summer nights. The atmosphere is very relaxing especially after that cold winter blue. When speaking of an all inclusive in the Riviera Maya. All your meals drinks, motorized water sports, transfers gratuities and taxes are all included. Cost may vary from hotel to hotel, and again when choosing the hotel that fits your pocket book that's where the professional travel agent comes into play.

A one week package, in the Riviera Maya, may range anywhere from $1,300.00 to $1,900.00 per person this also includes the airfare to this destination.

My choice of chain hotels vary! However I do recommend a few of the RIU chains they have a lot to offer. The DREAMS PUERTO AVENTURAS is also very stunning. Or if you would like to take it to the next level with that special loved one the SECRETS CAPRI HOTEL is second to none, and an unforgettable choice.

So as I am writing the snow is falling. And I am sure you are either stopped in traffic or shoveling that walkway to your home.

So don't delay, email or fax, your travel professional travel agent, to book this warm treasure which is the Riviera Maya.
